A Life of Fritz Schumacher

Barbara Wood

- Back in print
- 100th anniversary of Schumacher's birth
- Schumacher's views on industry, the environment, education and sustainable economics resonate with the key ideas of our time: relocalisation, sustainability and the Transition movement
- New Foreword by Simon Jenkins

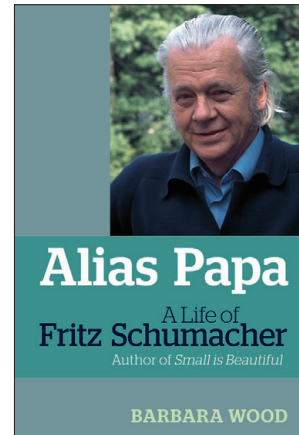

"Wholly admirable." – John Grigg, The Observer

"An excellent biography that does not conceal the warts."

– Malcolm Rutherford, Financial Times

E. F. Schumacher was a key figure in the development of environmentalism in the 20th century, and has left an enduring legacy. A profound thinker who was admired by Keynes, Beveridge and Cripps, he was for many years economic adviser to the Coal Board, and later put his ideas into practice by setting up the Intermediate Technology Development Group and becoming involved with the Soil Association. He was the inspiration for many other organisations that continue to this day, including the New Economics Foundation and Schumacher College.

The Author: Barbara Wood, Schumacher's eldest daughter, has worked for the Intermediate Technology Development Group (founded by her father, and now called Practical Action) and Voluntary Services Overseas Association.
